Beaver Brook

The Beaver Brook marsh walking trail is on private property with a public access easement. It loops along the edge of a 41 acre fresh water marsh and the Beaver Brook canal. A boardwalk that was destroyed in a 2012 fire is being planned for replacement in 2016 or 2017. Off-street parking and walking trail enhancements will provide access to the new boardwalk for people of all abilities when the project is completed.

Waterfowl and other wildlife can be viewed in the marsh and nearby forested areas. Ospreys have nested nearby and are seen here. Turtles, green frogs, and northern water snakes can be seen along the edge of the marsh and sunning themselves on marsh logs.

Butterflies, dragonflies, and damselflies can be seen along the trail between the marsh and the Beaver Brook canal.

This protected marsh habitat is bordered by Metro North Railroad and nearby I-95. Walking along this conservation area is reminder that these ecological areas are important habitats for wildlife, buffers for people, and water quality.

Managing the Phragmites Common Reed and other invasive plants are being planned during the boardwalk restoration project. The Phragmites are an example of a non-native invasive plant that degrades the ecosystem habitat and creates a fire hazard.
