

Discovering Common Ground Through Sharing Stories

In this hands-on training, participants will learn how to organize and facilitate a story circle, a technique with roots in the civil rights movement, which makes it possible for a community's residents, leaders, and officials to discover common ground they never knew they had, even on challenging and controversial issues. This training is open to all – including people and municipalities who have started hosting community conversations and want to learn from each other's experience, and those who have not yet started and are looking for a place to start. This training will build on the skills developed during last May's session on facilitating effective community conversations, but newcomers are also encouraged to take part.
