

Bethany Field, later known as Bethany Airport, was opened in 1923. It was one of the first airports in New England. It was closed in 1965. The original 112-acre property was intended to become an industrial park when purchased by the Town of Bethany in 1967, but instead has become a multipurpose property which currently has a recycling center, two equestrian rings, announcer's stand and a soccer field. It also contains the Town Garage and the old Airport Hanger which is being converted into a recreational facility. An astute hiker will spot some of the old airport markers in the wooded area. The property is still called the Bethany Airport by residents and municipal officials.

Approximately half of the property is open field, but a majority of the property is wooded. Within this wooded area, there is a network of multi-use passive recreational trails, and many side trails. No motorized vehicles are permitted on the trails. The trails are generally level, with some seasonal wet areas.

In 2005, as his Eagle Scout Leadership Project for Bethany Boy Scout Troop 59, Ben Francois mapped and blazed the airport trails with a team of helpers, creating a system of three main trails designated with rectangular blazes. Alternative loop and connecting trails use a triangular blaze.
