

The City of West Haven provides 3.5 miles of public beach or waterfront park, each with its own amenities or environmental setting. Beaches from Bradley Point Park to Sandy Point are networked through a 1.7 mile walkway providing pedestrians, bicyclists and roller-bladers a continuous waterfront urban “greenway” experience. Views of Long Island Sound exist throughout most of the walkway and Long Island, New York can usually be seen very faintly in the distance.

The Savin Rock Conference Center is also located adjacent to Bradley Point and provides benches, telescopes, occasional public art displays, and a gazebo. Interpretive signage is provided on the origins of Savin Rock. The site includes a museum that provides the history of the White Park/Savin Rock Amusement Park on the site 100 years ago that offered roller coasters, rides, and other amusement.

Bradley Point Park (shown below) is a small sandy beach with a grassy park area. This site offers spectacular 4th of July fireworks with views to other displays along the shore. There are benches with extensive Long Island Sound views. Three sets of permanent posts for impromptu volleyball games are available on the sandy beach. Temporary toilets during the summer season and ample parking for 40 cars is available on site.
